DETAILED ACTION

Allowable Subject Matter

1. Claims 1-11, 14-15 are allowed.
2. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:

The closest prior art of record is U.S. Pat No. 6,282,653 to Berstis et al and U.S. Pat No. 6,230,204 to Fleming III.

Berstis et al disclose a method of determining royalty for use of copyrighted digital materials on the internet by first establishing a count of a number of permitted copies of the digital file and then decrement the count every time the file has been transferred until count reaches zero. Then royalty is calculated.

Fleming III disclose a method of determined the total usage of computer resources by users.

As per claims 1 and 14, the closest prior art of record taken either together or in combination with each other fails to teach or suggest the specific method of attributing cost to a group of entities based on the number of accesses of a certain product for each entity of the group of entities. Specifically no prior art teaches:

“obtaining, for each of the entities, a maximum value relating to a maximum number of accesses of the entity in all the time windows over the time interval resulting in a group of maximum values for the plurality of entities;

finding a smallest maximum value among the group of maximum values for all the entities;

distributing costs for the smallest maximum value among all the entities having access to the product in the time interval;

finding a next-higher maximum value among the group of maximum values;

determining a difference in costs for the smallest maximum value and the next-higher maximum value from the predetermined relationship;

distributing the difference in costs among the entities having an equivalent or a higher maximum value than the next-higher maximum value;

repeatedly finding a further next-higher maximum value among the group of maximum values and distributing a determined difference in costs for the further next-higher maximum value among the entities having an equivalent or a higher maximum value;

accumulating the costs obtained in the steps of distributing for each of the entities individually to obtain an accumulated cost result; and outputting the portion of the total costs for each of the entities based on the accumulated cost result for each of the entities."

Claims 2-10 depends upon claim 1 and has all the limitations of claim 1 and is allowable for the same reason.

As per claims 11 and 15, the closest prior art of record taken either together or in combination with each other fails to teach or suggest the specific method of attributing cost to a group of entities based on the number of accesses of a certain product for each entity of the group of entities. Specifically no prior art teaches:

Art Unit: 3639

“obtaining, for each of the entities, a maximum value relating to a maximum number of accesses of the entity in all the time windows over the time interval resulting in a group of maximum values;

finding a highest maximum value among the group of maximum values for all the entities;

finding a nest-lowest maximum value among the group of maximum values;

determining a difference in cost for the highest maximum value and the next-lower maximum value from the predetermined relationship;

distributing the difference in costs among the entities having the highest maximum value;

repeatedly finding another next-lower maximum value among the group of maximum values and distributing a determined difference for the next-lower maximum value among the entities having an equivalent or a higher maximum value; and accumulating the costs obtained in the steps of distributing for each of the individual entities to obtain an accumulated cost result and outputting the portion of the total costs for each of the entities based on the accumulated cost result for each of the entities.”

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled “Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance.”
